Walking in larger groups

There has been some discussion recently about the protocol to use when the number of members in a group reaches fifteen and beyond. The committee has discussed this and the following guidance has been agreed:

Groups should preferably not exceed 15. In the event of there being more than 15, the designated leader should seek a second leader for the group. The two leaders, together, should share information including the route to be followed, weather forecast and agree the best way to manage the group. For example, the second leader may take on the position of back marker or may lead a separate group (so long as neither group has fewer than 4 members).

As a reminder, a back marker should ensure that the group stays together and should be the leader's 'eyes and ears' at the rear of the group. The leader and back marker should be in regular communication during the walk. The appointment of a back marker is good practice and is essential in poor conditions.
